ARC-GEN CONTINUES EXPANSION WITH HAT-TRICK OF APPOINTMENTS

Arc-Gen, the UK's supplier of premium welder-generator equipment, has announced a hat-trick of appointments to its team based in Wolverhampton.

Darren Richards has been promoted to operations manager and will be responsible for overseeing Arc-Gen's team of 15 technical staff. He is joined by customer support team leader, Tom Page and marketing executive Katherine McEwan. The appointments build on Arc-Gen's continuing focus to deliver first class customer service.

Chief executive of Arc-Gen, Mark Hodgkins, said: "The appointments reflect the continued growth of the company and our commitment to invest in our people. We have recently reached the national finals of the Construction Industry's Best Places to Work 2008 awards.

"Darren, Tom and Katherine are local to the Wolverhampton area and have strong backgrounds in their respective fields of electrical engineering and marketing. They will significantly enhance our focus on quality and expansion through driving our operations and marketing support forward."

Arc-Gen has enjoyed steady year on year growth and recently broadened its product range with the addition of water pumps and pressure washers following the acquisition of West Bromwich based Hilti TW.
